A combination of quality and style

Visitors will be able to discover various standard ranges of switches, sockets, reading lamps, etc., as well as a few examples of bespoke creations – undeniably one of the brand's best assets.

They will also have a chance to admire the quality materials (brass, tempered glass, porcelain), the variety of formats and the possible combinations of mechanisms, not to mention Meljac's expertise in the creation of all types of casings (thermostats, home automation systems, air conditioning control panels, blind controls, audio controls, etc.). The company will present its 29 elegant finishes, produced using in-house surface treatment and meticulous craftsmanship. This process involves various complex stages, performed by hand, giving rise to the creation of Nickel, Chrome, Gunmetal, Bronze and Gilding finishes, etc.

Customisation and bespoke creations

By adding engravings, resins, LEDs, backlighting, etc., Meljac offers numerous customisation possibilities and options with various designs and finishes for toggles or push buttons. Visitors will also discover examples of brass casings (thermostats, air conditioning control panels, etc.). Meljac's products are compatible with all home automation systems on the market.

Users can therefore harmonise their fittings perfectly, while remaining free to choose the technology that suits them best.

Combining functionality and artistic creation

Meljac will also be presenting its new offering for 2024: the Studio collection.

Resulting from a partnership with Studio Pluriel, an artisans' collective created by Estelle Matczak, this range draws on Estelle's specialist know-how in torched patina effects and etching. Seven patterns are now available on solid brass Meljac switches, bringing a unique artistic dimension to interior fittings.

Estelle Matczak and Meljac are also able to pool their know-how to produce bespoke models for specific projects, with custom colours, patterns, textures and engravings.
